Made possible with funding from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

The development of the online Senior Resource Guide is a collaborative effort between SWIRCA & More and the University of Southern Indiana’s Center for Healthy Aging and Wellness. This joint effort is made possible with funding from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. In addition to SWIRCA & More and USI, many community members and providers have provided feedback in the design and creation of this guide. This guide has been developed for elders, caregivers, and professionals who work with older adults in southwestern Indiana’s eight-county area.

SWIRCA & More and USI are proud partners of the Healthy Communities Partnership of Southwest Indiana.

About USI

Founded in 1965, the University of Southern Indiana enrolls nearly 10,000 undergraduate and graduate students in 80 undergraduate majors, 10 master's programs, and one doctoral program. The campus of this comprehensive public university is on 1,400 acres just outside of Evansville in southwestern Indiana.

The University offers study-abroad opportunities in more than 60 countries, and is host to international students from around the globe. USI also serves more than 15,000 individuals annually in continuing education courses, noncredit workshops, conferences, and seminars.

The Center for Healthy Aging and Wellness is housed in the College of Nursing and Health Professions (CNHP), one of four academic colleges at USI. The college's programs prepares students with clinical skills, academic knowledge, and professional values needed to provide quality health care. The college offers various programs, including three associate degrees, seven baccalaureate degrees, and three master's degrees, and the only doctoral program on the USI campus, the doctorate of nursing practice degree. Academic programs include:

- Dental Assisting
- Dental Hygiene
- Diagnostic Medical Sonography
- Dietetics
- Food and Nutrition
- Health Services
- Health Administration
- Nursing
- Occupational Therapy
- Occupational Therapy Assistant
- Radiologic Imaging Sciences
- Respiratory Therapy

Category Descriptions

Abuse & Neglect: Resources to help elders suffering from harmful acts, such as physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional or psychological abuse, financial exploitation, and neglect, including self-neglect. For emergencies, call 911 immediately.

Adult Day Care: Structured, comprehensive, community-based care designed to meet the needs of impaired adults in a protected setting during the day. Some facilities offer a wide range of therapeutic and rehabilitative activities as well as social activities, meals, and transportation. Specialized programs for individuals with Alzheimer's disease or related disorders also exist.

Assisted Living: Residential living that provides meals, housekeeping, transportation, socialization, individualized personal care, and health services for people who require assistance with daily activities but not the level of care offered by nursing facilities. The level of care and services vary by facility, but a 24-hour on-site response staff is usually available.

Blind & Hearing Impaired Services: Resources for those living with visual or hearing impairment, including testing centers, resource centers, and specialized supplies.

Councils and Agencies on Aging: A nationwide network of state and local agencies that help older people plan and care for their life-long needs. Services include information and referral for in-home services, counseling, legal services, adult day care, skilled nursing care/therapy, transportation, personal care, respite care, nutrition, and meals.

Counseling & Mental Health: Assistance and guidance offered by a trained professional in dealing with personal, social, or psychological problems and difficulties.

Food Pantries: Typically non-profit, charitable organizations that distribute food to those who have difficulty purchasing enough food to avoid hunger. Many food pantries have usage limits and are not meant to support people in the long-term.

Health Supplies & Durable Medical Equipment: Supplies for homecare and medical equipment that is typically ordered by a doctor for use in the home, such as walkers, wheelchairs, and hospital beds.

Home Care (Medical/Non-Medical): Home care encompasses a variety of services in a person's home including: part-time nursing care, personal care, help with chores (cleaning, meal preparation, laundry, etc.), therapies (physical, occupational, and speech), or simply a volunteer to visit and talk.

Home Delivered Meals: Agencies that provide low cost, hot, nourishing meals to the elderly and disabled, allowing frail, homebound people to remain in their own homes. Other online companies exist, but the cost can be significant, and financial assistance is not usually accepted by these sites.

Home Safety & Medical Monitoring: Includes services to make living independently at home safer, such as monitoring of medication, wander prevention, home modification, telehealth, and emergency alert buttons.

Hospice: Continuous care provided for a terminally-ill person and family during the final stages of life. The care includes physical care, counseling, and support services (emotional, social, and spiritual). Care is usually focused on comfort and quality of life, rather than a cure. Hospice programs often use a team approach, including nurses, doctors, social workers, and clergy.

Hospitals: Health care institutions that provide a variety of specialized medical care and emergency care by a trained staff 24/7.

Independent Living: For seniors who want to live on their own, but don't want to have all the chores that go along with having a home. Many communities are specifically for seniors, but there are low-income housing options that serve all ages. Services, activities, and cost vary by facility. Call your local Area Agency on Aging Resource Center or local housing authority for more information about public, affordable, or private housing options.

Legal Services: Legal assistance provided by a trained individual or organization. Some agencies provide services at low or no cost to those unable to afford an attorney. Attorneys included in this category are all Certified Elder Law Attorneys through the National Elder Law Foundation.

Meal Sites: Nutritional programs that provide free or low-cost meals in a group setting, such as senior housing, senior centers, churches, etc.

Medical & Dental Assistance: Medical and dental services for individuals without insurance. Some facilities offer sliding scale fees or free one-time services for those demonstrating financial need.

Medicare & Medicaid: Medicare is the federal health insurance program that provides hospital and medical care to people age 65 or older, and to some younger people who are very ill or disabled. Medicaid is a joint federal/state insurance program that pays for health care for individuals and families with low incomes or very high medical bills relative to their income and assets. Also includes State Health Insurance Assistance Program (SHIP) locations.

Nursing Facilities: Nursing homes offer around-the-clock care if someone is unable to live on their own, or if they need to recover after having an illness or operation. Most homes offer short-term and long-term skilled nursing care, including rehabilitation, and medical and nursing procedures, depending on the person's needs.

Outpatient Rehabilitation: This category is for facilities that offer rehabilitation and different types of therapy. Most of the providers specialize in outpatient rehabilitation.

Prescription & Financial Assistance: Provides counseling and relief for the poor in need of assistance. Services offered vary greatly by organization. Also includes assistance for those unable to afford medication. Always check with your medication's manufacturer for patient assistance programs offered through the company.

Senior Centers: A place where older adults can come together for social activities, nutrition, educational events, and/or recreational opportunities.

Social Security & Division of Family Resources: Listings for the Social Security Administration (SSA) and the Division of Family Resources (DFR).

Substance Abuse: Resources for people who are struggling with substance abuse themselves or the family of people who are abusing substances.

Support Groups: Support groups offer various types of help, usually non-professional and non-material, for a common situation or affliction. A support group may also work to inform the public or engage in advocacy.

Transportation: Providers who offer assistance getting people to and from shopping centers, medical appointments, senior centers, or other places.

Veterans Services: This category includes agencies or organizations that are specifically designed to help veterans and their families.

Volunteer Opportunities: Volunteering is an altruistic activity intended to promote good and improve quality of life. It can promote feelings of self-worth and respect as well as offering skill development, socialization, and fun.

Wellness Programs: Evidence-based programs for seniors backed by a national organization or hospital. Check your local senior center or churches for additional programs.
